Mablean Deloris Ephriam, Esq. (born April 23, 1949) is the former judge on the television program Divorce Court. She presided over the show from the beginning of the current version of the show in 1999 until the 2006-2007 season, when she was replaced by former Power of Attorney Judge Lynn Toler. On Divorce Court, Ephriam was humorous and usually had the audience laughing, with her noticeably quirky voice and shocked reactions, by the ex-couple's outrageous behavior. Since Toler has replaced Ephriam on Divorce Court, ratings for the court show have dropped 20% for the 2006-2007 season.

She made a short appearance in the film adaptation of the play Diary of a Mad Black Woman, portraying (fittingly) a judge. She also played the same character in the sequel, Madea's Family Reunion. Her first name is pronounced "may-BLENE," as in the Chuck Berry song

"Maybellene."

Ephriam is a native of Hazlehurst, Mississippi. Although she had never actually served as a judge before Divorce Court, she has plenty of experience and knowledge of the law, and she is a divorcee herself. Ephriam started her law career as a correctional officer in the Women's Division of the Federal Bureau of Prisons and worked as a trial attorney for over 20 years. In 1982, she opened her own law practice, dealing mainly with personal injury and family law cases. In 1999, when Divorce Court was revived, she was chosen to become the show's presiding judge.

Ephriam's trademark phrase on Divorce Court was "Look deep before you leap," advising would-be newlyweds to examine each others' behaviors and attitudes carefully before they decide to marry. While she encouraged her litigants to discuss sensitive issues to get to the heart of what was causing the divorce, she was quick to restore order in her courtroom when things got out of hand, scolding litigants for disrespecting each other, or the court.

In March 2006, it was announced that Ephriam would leave Divorce Court at the end of the 2005-2006 season (her seventh behind the bench), reportedly because she and the show's producers were unable to come to an agreement on a contract extension. She was replaced by Toler, a former judge from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, who formerly presided over the short-lived syndicated courtroom TV show Power of Attorney.

Ephriam also appeared on the first season of Celebrity Fit Club where she went from 208 lbs to 183, losing 25 lbs, 12% of her body weight. Ephriam revealed to VH1 that she has kept off all of the weight. She added that her weight goes up and down, but she never exceeds 183.

Mynisha's Circle Two Years Later

Mynisha Crenshaw's family remembers her and the other children who died in 2005. Rev. Reggie Beamon called on all the parents and loved ones of the children who died from violence to step forward and call their name.

SAN BERNARDINO

By Megan Carter

Hundreds came out to remember eleven-year-old Mynisha Crenshaw and the 9 others who were senselessly killed in violence two years ago. Many of the parents of the slain youth attended with tears in their eyes as they listened, watched and took part in calling their children's names. The pain was still fresh on their faces.

Steve Lambert, editor of the San Bernardino Sun and founder of Mynisha's Circle, said that he could not sit still and see another child gunned down when he heard what happened to Mynisha. She and her family were sitting down to dinner when a group of gang members walked past their apartment and began shooting. "She was an 11 year old girl living with her parents. She'd just gotten up from the dinner table when the calm of the evening was broken by the all too familiar thunder of gunfire," he said. He painted the vivid picture of her Sixth Ward San Bernardino City Councilman Rikke Van Johnson's reelection is all but certain.

Johnson leads Betty Dean Anderson, his closest challenger, by 183 votes and has 50.56 percent of the vote. The news puts Johnson in the driver's seat for the win.

"I've got the majority," said an elated Johnson. "This is good news - real good news."

The results from the yet-to-be-counted ballots from the Nov. 6 election -- about 1,200 provisional ballots and another 350 duplicate ballots will be released at 5 p.m. Friday, according to Kari Verjil, the county registrar of voters.

Hold the champagne, for that matter don't expect Anderson to concede.

Camp Obama Rolls Into the Inland Empire

Camp Obama came to Rancho Cucamonga this past Saturday and volunteers from the Inland Empire came out to get involved in the grassroots campaign. Camp Obama has 3 main goals:

1. To identify Obama supporters in a particular region and educate them as to the message of the campaign and include them in a campaign that's not just about the candidate, but about the people as well.

2. Inform supporters of the national campaign strategy, how California fits into that strategy and specifically what the CA field program is doing. It's all about translating movement into victory!!

3. Once educated and informed as to the specific structure of the Obama campaign, campaign leaders will fully integrate Obama supporters into the campaign structure by empowering them to work in their own congressional districts.

Leaders in the Inland Empire on the Obama campaign include: Jocelyn Anderson, Regional Field Organizer

IE Cities Falling While Elected Officials Bicker

Most of us are familiar with the story "Nero Fiddled While Rome Burned". Some have argued that it did not happen but putting that aside we do know that Rome did burn while Nero was in a leadership position. Nero was the leader of the Roman Empire during the period of 54 to 68 A.D. The point behind the story was Rome was in dire need of his undivided attention to manage, give direction, and gather resources to extinguish the flames that were consuming the city; instead Nero decided to entertain himself with music that was soothing only to him and his closest friends.

Here in the Inland Empire we have a wonderful opportunity to build a model Empire if the leadership in the cities of Riverside and San Bernardino can put aside petty political posturing and do the people's business. In one city the council of the past ignores and limits public participation in city affairs. The other city has in the past used the council meeting to give campaign speeches and take personal jabs at each other. I have witnessed these exchanges and read reports of others. None of these actions have delivered one thing to the table that would benefit the public. Even though I would like to call names I am going to refrain from doing so because we all know who engages in these tactics.

With the growth in population of our area the leadership must focus their attention on economic development, educating our workforce, alleviating transportation congestion, removing things that contribute to gang violence, upgrading our parks to become family friendly, improving our streets, cleaning our air, revitalizing our inner cities, reducing crime while making our neighbor's safe, restoring public trust in our government and the list could go on and on. We have the natural resources to turn this desert into an "Oasis of Green" with the overabundance of underground water in the area. This can become the land of "Milk & Honey" if we work together and not bicker with each other. We have the people, all we have to do is train them. We have the educational institutions, all we have to do is teach the students. We have the land all we have to do is develop it. We have the airports, all we have to do is develop them. We have the experience in our leaders, all we have to do is set aside egos. We have the financial resources, all we have to do is set priorities. All we have to do is muster the will and courage to work together.

If Nero had put aside his music and paid attention to saving Rome his legacy would be different. To the elected leaders what will your legacy be, one of a Builder or a Bicker?

They Say A Picture Is Worth A Thousand Words

They say a picture is worth a thousand words and the picture we ran last week with Betty Dean Anderson, Wendy McCammack and Jim Penman in the background said it all to the people of the 6th Ward of San Bernardino. Prior to the election, I wrote in one of my editorials that Jim Penman, "the puppet master" was recruiting someone to run against Rikke Van Johnson. One of the people Penman approached turned him down flat cold. So he sought another in Betty Anderson. When she announced her intention to run for office, she did so in Wendy McCammack's 7th Ward and not the 6th Ward. On the night of the election (which was last week), she held her celebration at the puppet master's campaign headquarters in McCammack's 7th Ward. Now I have known Mrs. Anderson and Mr. Penman for some time and they are nice people but this attempt to circumvent the political wishes of the people in the 6th Ward is not going to happen. Mr. Penman has tried for years to dictate the political direction of the Sixth Ward even going after former Councilwoman Valerie Pope Ludlam.

I don't have to say anymore other than to ask you to look at the picture and ask why?

Getting Serious About Global Warming

Joseph C. Phillips

I am concerned about global warming. I have heard and read repeatedly that we are in the midst of a planetary emergency and I am distressed that we may not be doing enough to address the current environmental crisis. I am distressed about the legacy this generation may be leaving our children and grandchildren. It is time to act. Even signing onto the Kyoto protocol would reduce emissions by only 0.07 degrees Celsius by the year 2050. Clearly, we must take more drastic measures if we are to avoid the cataclysmic repercussions of our irresponsible stewardship of the planet.

Forty percent of carbon emissions are the result of power plants burning fossil fuels. Cap and trade systems provide financial incentive for industry to reduce harmful emissions, but reduction is not elimination. It is essential that we begin transitioning to clean fuels - wind, solar and nuclear energy. Let's do away with environmental impact studies. The survival of the human race must take precedent over our concern for a species of toad or the flight patterns of birds. It is time to raise taxes and cut social services so that Congress will have available the tens of billions of federal dollars and loan guarantees that will be necessary to build enough reactors and wind farms to service our electricity needs.

Air conditioners use 1/6 of our electricity and on hot days may represent up to half of the peak power usage. Municipalities especially those in the south and south west should immediately ban the use of air conditioners, at least until such time as we can provide the needed electricity cleanly. Many cities have already banned smoking in public and in apartments. Global warming presents a much more immediate danger than does second hand smoke.

Hybrid cars are certainly a step in the right direction, but they are not a panacea. The "dust to dust" environmental cost to build a hybrid car is extremely high. According to CNW marketing, the energy cost of the Prius over its lifetime (300,000 miles) was 3.25 per mile. Conversely, the cost of the Hummer H3 was 1.95 per mile over the same period. It would be much better if we committed ourselves to getting cars off the highways altogether. State governments can create a disincentive to automobile usage by increasing the cost of licensing and operating an automobile. I am proposing that we raise the cost of registering a car to $5,000 dollars and increase the gasoline tax inflating the price of gasoline to 6 dollars or more per gallon. This would be offset by tax credits for the purchase and use of bicycles.

According to the United Nations, raising livestock for food is one of the single greatest causes of global warming. One-fifth of all global warming-causing emissions come from animal agriculture. Meat is an environmental hazard and should be taxed in order to reduce its use. Vegetarian meals use considerably less energy to prepare and would reduce the average weight and health care costs of the average American. In addition, localities would be restricted to only those foods that are grown or produced within a radius of one days transport.

The California legislature recently attempted to outlaw incandescent light bulbs, mandating the use of fluorescent light bulbs, which burn longer. These bulbs are expensive, placing a burden on poorer people. They also contain high levels of mercury and must be disposed of under the household hazardous waste programs. I would go further and ban the use of light bulbs in the home all together and simply use candles. Candles are inexpensive, the wax is reusable and there is no burning of fossil fuel in order to provide electricity. Less light will force Americans to rely more on the light of day thus reducing the work day to daylight hours thus further lowering the use of electricity.

These suggestions may seem a bit harsh, and the economic costs will no doubt be huge costing each American family tens of thousands of dollars. However, we are either going to be serious about reducing the human impact on global warming or we are not. If the consequences of man made global warming are as dire as we are constantly being told then it is past time for us to stop talking the talk and begin literally walking the walk.

Barack Obama: Whites' Great Hope?

Dear George E Curry
NNPA Columnist

Usually, I don't write columns about stories that appear in a single publication, but one that appeared on the front page of the Wall Street Journal on Nov. 10 really got my attention. The story about Barack Obama was headlined, "Whites' Great Hope? Barack Obama and the Dream of a Color-Blind America."

In the interest of full disclosure, let me state that I've said all along that I believe that among the Democratic candidates, former Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina has the best chance of winning the general election. I base that on the fact that no non-Southerner has been elected president on the Democratic ticket since John F. Kennedy in 1960.

That notwithstanding, it's fascinating how the voters respond to Obama's candidacy, especially Black public figures.

African-American voters are supporting Clinton, largely on the strength of her husband's eight years in the White House, over Obama by a margin of 46 percent to 37 percent, according to the latest Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll.

Obama and Clinton have remarkably similar records. Each received an A on the latest NAACP Report Card -- Obama had a 100 percent score and Clinton 94. Each is a United States senator. And although some try to depict Obama, a former Illinois state legislator, as inexperienced, he has served more time in public office than Clinton.

Obama and Clinton are graduates of Ivy League law schools; Clinton is a product of Yale and Obama graduated from Harvard and was the first African-American editor of the prestigious Harvard Law Review.

There is little difference between them on major issues. And there is no question that Obama, the son of a White mother and Kenyan father, celebrates his Black ancestry. He told one TV interviewer, "I'm rooted in the African-American community, but I'm not limited to it."

Unlike civil rights stalwarts Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, many Whites say they can support Obama's candidacy.

"After decades of often bitter polarization and racial tension on issues ranging from the spread of civil rights to affirmative action, many whites say they are drawn to Sen. Obama precisely because they think his mixed-race background reflects America's increasingly diverse population and projects a more optimistic vision of the country's racial future," Jonathan Kaufman wrote in the Wall Street Journal story.

Referring to Obama's candidacy, Kaufman wrote, "It is prompting significant numbers of white Americans to consider voting for him not despite his racial background, but because of it."

Of course considering voting for

Obama is not the same as voting for him. Just as Blacks are favoring Clinton over Obama, White voters support Clinton in that same Wall Street Journal/NBC News by a 46 percent to 32 percent margin.

I am more concerned about the lack of support for Obama among African-Americans, many of whom refused to endorse Jesse Jackson or Al Sharpton. Some said the two civil rights leaders lacked experience and others said they were divisive public figures.

Well, what's the excuse now?

Billionaire Bob Johnson, Magic Johnson, Rep. John Lewis, Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, Rep. Kendrick Meek, among others, are all in the Clinton camp. Johnson, the Black Entertainment Television founder, says it's because she is the best candidate.

Based on what?

Whether it's experience or voting records, Obama is at least equal to Clinton. And with everything else being equal, it's incredulous that Black elected officials who openly and sometimes subtly ask to be elected, in part, to assure Black political power, are now lined up in the Clinton camp.

They can't ask for a more qualified candidate to carry the party's banner. Not only is Obama fully qualified, he stands the best chance among Blacks of attracting White voters.

Mary Pattillo, a professor at Northwestern University, told the Wall Street Journal: "You can't get angry as a Black person working in white America. To get a message across, Black professionals are always thinking about the perfect balance of assertiveness and non-threateningness."

Doug Wilder learned that lesson in Virginia before he became the first African-American elected governor. Deval Patrick also struck that "perfect balance" to become governor of Massachusetts. Obviously, Obama has mastered it as well.

Blacks who support Clinton over Obama can't have it both ways. They can't keep getting elected in part based on racial appeals yet refuse to endorse Obama, whose appeal extends far beyond race. The next time one of them makes a purely racial appeal and most of them will -- they should be soundly rejected.

Ironically, Gov. Patrick and Oprah Winfrey -- two figures sometimes criticized as minimizing the issue of race -- have boldly endorsed Obama. It's too bad that Black elected officials endorsing Clinton don't display similar courage or unselfishness.

What's Bothering Me About the Presidential Race?

By Bill Fletcher Jr.
NNPA Columnist

I find myself anxious, frustrated and just downright angry about the apparent coronation of Senator Hillary Clinton as the Democratic Party nominee for President. Don't tell me that you haven't noticed this? Without one vote having been cast and with a total reliance on opinion polls, we are being told that Senator Clinton is not only the lead, but that she is the near shoo-in for the nomination.

Did anyone ask your opinion? No one has asked mine, but the steamroller is going forward, and despite the fact that it is very difficult to determine what Senator Clinton actually stands for, the US public has been informed that she will more than likely get the nomination.

The US political system is among the most undemocratic on the planet for a country that styles itself a democracy. Dependent on big-money and with only a wink toward full public access to the media for all candidates, the room for "respectable" and "acceptable" candidates keeps narrowing.

While we have witnessed debates among the candidates, media focus on the more "realistic" of the candidates whatever that means marginalizes opinions and insights that are considered unconventional by the established order. It is much the same when the media seeks so-called experts on issues and gets--time and again--the same voices that rarely diverge dramatically from what the media defines as acceptable and mainstream.

This environment promotes cynicism and despair where too many people come to believe that the decks are stacked against the views and participation of the average person. In many respects the decks are stacked.

There are ways, however, that they can become un-stacked, but this depends on the vision, courage and strategy of the so-called non-mainstreamed candidates. When, for instance, Rev. Jesse Jackson ran for President in 1984 and 1988, he was demonized and marginalized by the established order up to a certain moment.

That moment was when it became clear that Rev. Jackson spoke for and encouraged a movement of people at the base. A movement is not just a following and it is certainly more than a throng of potential voters. People were galvanized by the Jackson candidacies because they saw in his campaigns a voice for the voiceless and a space in which those fighting for social justice could find a home and, yes, hope.

I like some of what various candidates are saying, but I don't see any of them challenging us to rise up and become a force for change. Don't get me wrong: I am not looking for a savior, but it would be nice to have a champion and a leader of a movement. It's time to shake up the system rather than treat politics as a spectator sport.

national writer and activist. A Senior Scholar at the Institute for Policy Studies, he is the immediate past president of TransAfrica Forum and can be reached at papaq54@hotmail.com.

Our Bodies

Dr. Ernest
LEVISTER, JR.
F.A.C.P. F.A.C.P.M.

Music Therapy for Pain

Dear Dr. Levister: I am a retired music teacher disabled with severe arthritis. I found listening to music at least one hour a day helps relieve the pain. Is this real therapy or in my head? A.F.

Dear A.F. A little of both, a growing body of evidence indicates that listening to music can serve as an impressively effective analgesic. According to researchers at the Cleveland Clinic there are a number of theories about the way in which music can relieve pain and all involve some sort of neurophysiologic 'in your head' connection.

One theory is that music stimulates the release of endorphins, which are known to cause pain relief by lowering the body's pulse rate, blood pressure and respiratory rate. Another theory is that music promotes relaxation and redirects your attention away from your discomfort. Neither theory has been proven, but a large body of research has shown music does work to ease pain.

A study of 60 male and female patients who suffered chronic pain caused by osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, fibromyalgia and other related disorders were divided into three groups. One group listened to an hour of music of their own choice; a second listened for an hour each day to (classical, light jazz or easy listening) music prescribed by the research team; a third group spent an hour each day sitting quietly, but listening to no music. All patients kept diaries describing changes if any, none were on pain medication.

The groups listening to music experienced as much as a 21 percent decline in pain compared to the one to two percent drop in discomfort experienced by patients who did not listen to music.

Although the study group was small, the results reinforced similar findings in 34 earlier studies going back to 1986, indicating that you can help ease arthritis discomfort if you augment your pill-taking routine with a daily dose of Ella, Sarah, Billie Holiday, Mozart or for that matter Jimi Hendrix or Tina Turner.

Family Talks

The following vignette (a short sketch) points out how working in fifth or sixth gear provides an opportunity to acquire more knowledge and, with respect to one thing, that perfecting one method and having experiences with multiple methods are equally good. During orthopaedic residency I would get up extra early to make hospital ward rounds and then walk across town to attend Dr. DePalmar's 7:00am orthopaedic conference at Jefferson Hospital. He taught residents only his way of operating on, say, a shoulder joint because he had encountered and solved 99% of all the problems one might expect to face in operating on that shoulder problem. But, at my hospital, every attending surgeon had his own way of operating on that same joint. Hence, I learned multiple ways of operating on the same shoulder joint and to even be creative when such was indicated. Both approaches are needed to handle or deflect "the bullets" from whatever is machined gunned at you during marketplace preparation (e.g. your education and training) or while in the marketplace. In either situation there will be so many things to do at one time that the more ways you know how to handle a given problem on the spot and with accuracy, the greater your chances of not being knocked off your path. Working fast, accurately, and with a sense of curiosity opens the door to unexpected insights.

Options are items available for choice. They do not have to be well worked out in order to be considered. Neither do you have to like an option for it to work well for you. Let us use, for example, how to determine the type of money-making business to pursue. Youth unaccustomed to working hard and smart might begin with considering established things-- like small appliance repair, gardening, detailing cars and progressing up to something creative. The hard and smart workers will look to see what need or want is unmet for the public and make that a top priority. The creative and the hard workers see the common in the uncommon and see the uncommon in the common. Thus, their unique perspectives enable insightful decisions, many more options, and reproducible sound judgments compared with most people. After Plans A, B, and C are selected, preparation for the solution requires a great deal of work to gather information from those already in the field and from the library. Having a "criminal record" greatly narrows a youth's work options.

Since Time Management is an issue, the way to balance multiple spinning plates at the same time begins with Apportionment ("to divide and assign according to a plan"). It is similar to having a pie and cutting bigger sizes for the adults. To ensure success for the task at hand, smart planners select the amount of time, energy, and sixth gear effort to be given to the most important slice of pie. For the next most important "slice", work at a fourth gear level. For the remainder of the "slices" work at a two or three gear shift level. The rest may comfortably be dealt with by "giving a lick and a promise. Ones character ought to include possessing a strong sense of honor of Self; a great determination; pleasure in exploring the unknown; striving for perfection (why not do so?); the belief that what one is doing is extremely important; a sense of self-confidence, self-efficacy, self-love, self-respect, self-reliance, and self-trust. As independent "We/I" thinkers who do not follow the crowd in matters of serious business, there will be more failures, setbacks, and lack of help. But the successes are more frequent and of greater magnitude compared with those who play it safe.

Jena six: Opening the Pandora Box of Hate Crime

The term "hate crime" is a part of our everyday vernacular. But what's the definition of a hate crime? The dictionary defines a hate crime as "any of various crimes... when motivated by hostility to the victim as a member of a group (as one based on color, creed, gender, or sexual orientation)."

In recent weeks advocates for the Jena six has been pounding on the judicial table of lawmakers demanding that the White high school boys that hung nooses on the now cut down tree at Jena High School be prosecuted for a hate crime. In my layman opinion, I can understand why their efforts have been unsuccessful. Hate crime laws have extreme stiff penalties, up to 25 years in federal prison, and were written for racists like Buford O. Furrow, the racist that opened fire at a Jewish community center in August 1999. Furrow was charged with a hate crime for the murder of an Asian mail carrier and attempted murders of five Jewish people, including children, in the center. Furrow is an avowed racist and White separatist. Prior to his shooting spree he had served as a security officer in the Aryan Nations. Furrow committed a crime, the shootings, which were motivated by racism, his hatred for non-Whites.

Another notorious hate crime occurred in June 1998 although the wrongdoers were not charged with a hate crime. A Black man was dragged to his death in Jasper, Texas. Three White men with suspected ties to the Ku Klux Klan and the Aryan Nation chained James Byrd Jr., 49-year-old, to the back of a pickup truck and dragged him to his death. His head, neck, and right arm were found about a mile from his mangled torso. Three White men were convicted of the murder but not a hate crime because there was no hate crime law in Texas at the time, however State Sen. Rodney Ellis, authored the James Byrd Jr. Hate Crime Act of 2001, which is now in effect. Hate crimes are serious and not usually enforced based on emotionally charged claims.

A hate crime is not easy to prove, in vague circumstances such as a noose hanging from a tree. Although a hanging noose may conjure up the memories of Blacks being lynched, in the minds of many Blacks, that does not prove that hatred for Blacks and a conspiracy to lynch or intimidate Blacks was underfoot.

In New York in 2006, jurors, in the hate crime case of a White man who shouted racial epithets as he struck a Black man with a baseball bat, heard a Black Harvard Law School professor testify that the racial epithet referred to as the "n-word" does not automatically imply racial animus or hatred. Professor Randall Kennedy, author of "Nigger: The Strange Career of a Troublesome Word" and an expert in race linguistics, told a state Supreme Court jury in Queens that the epithet was "a complicated word" and that its precise meaning must be determined from its context. Mr. Kennedy offered an example, saying the word is used "sometimes as a racial insult, sometimes as a term of endearment." After all, Kennedy testified, Black people call each other niggers all the time. Ultimately, the jury did not convict the White man of a hate crime, although the victim was beat with a baseball bat.

In the noose hanging case, who can prove the mindset of the teens involved? Plus are hanging nooses actually a crime? Was it hatred with intent to intimidate Blacks or was it actually a prank in fond memories of playing cowboys as in the classic movie "Hang 'em High?"

It is a futile exercise for the Jena six advocates to continue to pound on the judicial table for the prosecution of a hate crime against the White teens. Any mediocre law student could successfully defend the White teens against a hate crime conviction just as any good lawyer could've successfully defended the Black teens against the attempted murder charges - in a fair and impartial trial. Who can prove that the Black boys attempted to murder the White boy and not just give him an old fashion gang-style beat-down?

Rev. Reggie Beamon, a co-founder of the Circle said that good things have come out of the terrible tragedy. Her name will be immortalized with the naming of a bill carried by Senator Barbara Boxer. He, like others, could not hold back the tears. The video presentation honored the memory of all 9 with a song, God is in the Roses.

Cheryl Brown, Black Voice News owner and District Representative, Senator Gloria Negrete McLeod also a founding member of the Circle implored the crowd to stop the violence, "the violence is hurting both families the one's who are victims and the one's who perpetrate the murder. Each of us must do better, we must make a commitment to our children. We must become better parents. We are not our children's friends we are their parents!"

Lambert, Beamon and Brown all spoke of the good things that have happened in the area since Mynisha's death. Lambert said, "much has happened in the two years since Mynisha Crenshaw's election has not been certified. Once the election is certified, I will consider my options and determine what I want to do at that time," said Anderson contacted at home on Monday.

Anderson could force a runoff only if a majority of the duplicated ballots left to be counted are in her favor.

The chances for an Anderson victory or runoff are slim as the ballots represent votes from across the county.

State law requires the registrar to conduct a recount of 1 percent of the votes along with an audit to ensure signatures match the number of votes cast.

Verjil expects to have the election certified Wednesday. Nov. 26 is the deadline as required by law.

"The candidates have been patient," said Verjil. "Be assured we're doing our best to get these results out by Thanksgiving."

The Nov. 6 election marked San Bernardino County's first return to paper ballots since county supervisors switched to electronic voting in 2003. The change back to paper Verjil said wasn't by choice: California Secretary of State Debra Bowen decertified several voting systems this past summer. Meanwhile Johnson said he is wasting no time getting back to the public's business.

"The people have spoken. The candidates have taken off the gloves. Everybody knows where we stand -- in essence you're either for or against moving forward -- I'm moving forward," said Johnson.

Family Group Asset Builders

Are you concerned about your future? Are you living from paycheck to paycheck? If so, you are not alone. Many Middle Class Americans are facing financial hardship with no apparent relief in sight. The Bible tells us, Noah received a warning of something he could not see, and because he trusted the LORD, he and his family were saved from the storm. (Genesis 7). Similar to Noah, we have specific instructions to follow to build our Financial Ark, so that our needs will be provided for in this coming "Time of Need."

If you want to consistently and generously give onto the Lord, provide for your children, and afford yourself additional income and benefits for your golden years and more, then let's talk. Come see the unveiling of the Ark. Yes there is a catch, you must have faith, and you must know Him.

7 Steps to Closing Big Sales

Sales are a critical factor for success in business. When you have a startup, often you must wear the sales hat among the many others. In this case, I am referring to selling your product or service to a client. Here are some suggestions that will help turbo-charge your sales efforts.

1. KNOW YOUR PRODUCTS AND/OR SERVICES

If possible, you should be your own client. Buy your own product and use it regularly. Justify the value to yourself. If you are not a user of your product, find those that are, and get them to use your product for a test run. Find people that are using your competitor's product or service and investigate the good and bad points.

You need to understand all the benefits and values your product or service provides. Testimonials, case studies and research reports all help in validating your claims.

Make a list of all of the products and services you offer and brainstorm scenarios of benefit and value for each one. Equate these benefits and values to dollars. Discover where other benefits and values, that are similar to your proposition, are priced.

Know the time frames for delivery. Understand the worst case scenarios and the mitigation plans.

Make sure you understand any associated contracts. There should not be a clause in the contract that you do not understand. Know where you have flexibility and rigidity in the contract.

2. GATHER THE LEADS

Using the data gathered in step one, brainstorm who could gain the most benefits and values out of your service. Start with existing contacts and their associates.

Search for prospects in newspapers, magazines, trade journals and online. Check press releases to find companies that are investing in the benefits and values you provide and check out their competitors.

3. DO YOUR HOMEWORK

After you find a lead you will target, research the industry, competition and all the information you can find about that lead (their website is a good start), with a focus on how you can provide value.

Target the CXO level when making your pitch. Find out who the decision maker is; it's often the CFO. With that in mind, make sure you understand the dollar figures associated with your proposition. You will need to describe how your solution will impact their operation in dollars, through either cost savings or increased revenue.

From my daily devotional: When your body is out of shape, isn't it up to you to work your own body back in shape? Nobody works out for you, right? Well, in the same sence, the Bible tells you to work out your own salvation. Nobody can do it for you. You cannot depend on ministers, your family or friends to do it for you. It is your salvation. You have to work this thing.

Raiders Can't Hang-On

Bears 17, Raiders 6

The Black Voice News

OAKLAND

TOAST-Bears' reciever Bernard Berrian beats defensive back Chris Carr and pulls in a 59-yard TD pass from Rex Grossman to take the lead in Sundays game. The Bears beat the Raiders 17-6.

By Gary Montgomery
Staff Writer

A sports writer asked Justin Fargas the old tired question "what's next for this team?" Fargas looked at him with puzlement and responded, "I believe it's going to Minnesota". Referring to the Raiders upcoming opponent on Sunday. Fargas' answer echoed the collective sentiment of the Raiders team.

Despite surrendering a 3-point lead with just under four minutes left in the game and losing a hard fought battle that could have easily been their third win of the season the Raiders are united in their quest for a single cause "getting on a winning track. "Sure it's frustrating, for us, the fans, coaches and everybody else. We are not playing perfect football. Not good enough to win games, but we are heading in the right direction," said Fargas.

"If we can just figure out how to win one of these things and we'll be on our way," said Warren Sapp. The Raiders (2-7) have fallen into last place in the AFC West again; a place the team has languished in over the past three seasons.

Sunday's loss to the Bears (4-5) was particularly painful for the Raiders for several reasons. First, instead of getting behind as they so often do, the offense scored on its first possession. Josh McCown, in his first start since week 2 lead the team on a 7-play 44-yard drive that ended with a Sebastian Janikowski field goal from the 20-yard line and a 3-0 lead. The drive was propelled by a 26-yard scramble by McCown. Secondly, the defense played flawless football most of the game even without both starting cornerbacks. Nnamdi Asomugha and Fabian Washington both sat out Sunday's game with minor injuries.

The patchwork defensive unit was still able to hold the Bears to only 3-points in the first half which ended in 3-3 tie. The defensive battle continued throughout the 3rd quarter with neither team able to take control of the game. The Bears' missed 53-yard field goal attempt by Robbie Gould was the only thing resembling offense during the period.

With 4:09 remaining in the game, Sebastian Janikowski boomed a 52-yard field goal to give the Raiders and 6-3 advantage and what at that point, could be the win. As if he had been waiting for a signal, three plays later, Bears quarterback Rex Grossman heaved a 59-yard touchdown pass to the outstretched arms of wide receiver Bernard Berrian for the go ahead score. Grossman's pass snatched victory right out of the Raiders hands.

"We are going to figure this out one day. When we get this fourth quarter stuff figured out we'll be fine," said Raiders head coach Lane Kiffin. "I thought we would run the ball a little better in the 4th quarter, but we didn't and that was the difference," continued Kiffin.

After falling behind 10-6, Josh McCown threw three consecutive incomplete passes and the Raiders were forced to punt. Again, the Raiders' defensive held and got the ball back with 1:24 reaming in the game for one last opportunity.

On the first play, Left End Adewale Ogunlye broke through and stripped the ball from McCown. Israel Idonije recovered the fumble for the Bears on the Raiders' 3-yard line. On the next play, Cedric Benson walked up the middle for a 3-yard game clinching touchdown.

"This is really painfully, to have it so close and then make a mistake, losing like that, it really feels bad," said Raider Tackle Robert Gallery.

With Sunday's loss, the Raiders have dropped 5 straight, all resulting from some form of fourth quarter mistakes. With every loss, the media's call for first round pick JaMarcus Russell grows louder and louder. "It's not just about giving him a chance (to play) _ it's about making sure things are right around him. You don't want to just throw him out there and let him have a bad day with no touchdown passes and lots of turnovers. Then you've got to rebuild him," said Kiffin.

Comparing records, this season would seem like little improvement over previous years, but that's were the comparison should end. This seasons team, although visibly affected by their fourth quarter failures are a more cohesive and unified than any team of the last three seasons. If young Lane Kiffin can continue to resist the calls to throw his young quarterback into the fire and keep building his offensive line the Silver and Black will be well on its way back.

Trojans "Rain"-out Cal

The Black Voice News

BERKELEY

By Gary Montgomery
Staff Writer

The USC Trojans made a big statement about the rest on their season on Saturday night. In front of a crowd of 72,516 rain-soaked Cal Fans packed into an old Memorial Stadium that makes the coliseum look modern, USC held off the Bears and escaped with their Pac-10 title and Rose Bowl hopes still alive. Entering to a chorus of Boos that started when their flight touched down, USC rode Chauncey Washington's amazing 220-yard performance to a 7-point victory. "It was a great night of college football from start to finish. Defensively, we didn't play like we wanted it. I can't tell you how sick I am about some of the plays we didn't make or the big opportunities that we missed. It came down to who was going to do something in the fourth quarter," said Pete Carroll.

Carol was right. In the early going it seemed as if USC may not have the will to take down the Bears at home. USC quarterback, John David Booty, returning to the lineup after missing three games with a broken finger was a little shaky in the early going.

USC (8-2,5-2 Pac-10) put the ball on the ground early and pinned themselves against their own goal line. When Cal took a 7-0 lead, USC was able to strike right back with a precision drive led by the powerful running of tailback Chauncey Washington.

Washington reeled off 64 of his career high 220-yard night on this scoring drive of 96 yards.

"He was great, awesome! We don't usually go with one guy like that, but he wouldn't let us take him out," said Carroll. Washington carried the ball 29 times on the evening. Stafon Johnson had 7 carries for 9-yards and a touchdown and Joe McKnight had 4 carries for 9 yards.

"I just wanted to get my feet under me, after slipping on the first carry and run with power, and then I just got into a rhythm," said Washington. Washington a fifth-year senior averaged 7.6 yards per carry on the rain-soaked field. "How great was that?" said John David Booty: "Imagine if I had to throw the ball 40 times tonight?"

Cal (6-4,3-4 Pac-10) put up a great fight and had an opportunity to tie the game until USC's fifth year cornerback, Terrell Thomas picked off Nate Longshore's pass at the USC 17-yard line ending Cal's final threat. "We made the plays at the end and they didn't. That's what it came down to," said Thomas.

Cal running back Justin Forsett tried to match Washington's performance. Forsett rushed for 164-yards on 31 attempts, averaging 5.3 yards per carry. Quarterback Nate Longshore threw for 199-yards, but had two interceptions, the second picked off by Thomas sealing their fate. With the loss, Cal drops out of Pac-10 contention and needs both remaining wins to improve their post-season Bowl prospects.

TROJAN EXPLOSION - Chauncey Washington exploded for a career-high 220-yards against Cal on Saturday propelling the Trojans to a 24-17 win in Berkeley.

With the win, USC grabbed third place in the Pac-10 standings and will take next weekend off. When they return, the Trojans will travel to Arizona to try and tumble the Pac-10 leading Sun Devils and take over second place.

"It's not over yet, we are not going anywhere. We want to win the Pac-10," said linebacker Rey Mauluga.

Even if the Trojans can knock off Arizona State though, they will need Oregon to loose at least one of their two remaining games in order to capture a share of the title. And, if all those good things happen, there's still that final game of the season against their pesky and unpredictable cross-town rival in the way.

After stumbling and getting knocked around a little this season, Pete Carroll has managed to push his USC, November winning streak to 21-0 and is still very much alive in the Pac-10 title race.

A Healthy Estate Plan Needs A Regular Check-Up

By Richard Nevins
Attorney at Law

A regular medical exam gives you a chance to discover if your body is in the early stages of a problem that can be prevented. When you file your tax return every year, you probably use that opportunity to think about your finances for the past year and your financial plans for the coming year.

Your estate plan should also be the subject of a regular review. An estate plan is a picture of how you will take care of your family when you are gone. The picture will change over time, because your life, and the people who are a part of it, will also change over time. A good estate plan should not be thought of as being solid as a rock, but as flexible as Jello. The plan should be capable of adapting to the changing shape of your life.

So, how do you know when it's time to give your estate plan a check-up? Regular routines are usually easier to remember. The IRS makes April 15th a difficult date to forget. So why not use that to make a complete financial and estate plan and review your estate documents.

If you can identify with any of the following events, then an immediate review of your estate plan is in order. If you expect

Air Force Captain & Surgeon Bailey, MD Has Done It All

Joseph A. Bailey, II, M.D.

Dr. Joseph A. Bailey, II served as a Captain in the United States

Airforce from 1962 to 1964. During his military stay, Bailey served as an orthopaedic surgeon for the military. (From Bailey's book: Manhood in Black Americans p.370), Bailey states: By means of the Berry Plan, physician interns were allowed to choose the time they went into the military. My choice was at the completion of my internship because this provided the time needed time to get my teeth (e.g. cavities) fixed and do other "stuff" as a captain. While at the military base in San Antonio, Texas, a Meharry classmate and I went to a café to eat. Despite being in uniform, they would not serve us "colored people". This took something out of me, as shown in no longer continuing to study for "wings" as a flight surgeon. It also started driving home the reality of the permanence of racial hatred and the necessity of preparing for it.

In the Philippines, I was in charge of the outpatient department, including nine Filipino physicians and tropical medicine. In medical school, I had elected to not pay much attention to tropical medicine since I thought it was a waste of time. This taught me that every field of medicine is important if I was to be a good general practitioner.

The Filipino physicians under my command were excellent. They had been trained to perfect their observation, touch, smell, hearing, and perhaps taste skills as applied to diagnosis and treatment. Therefore I spent time learning whatever they would teach me. It was so enjoyable to treat patients that instead of seeing only the required 20 a day, I saw 80. Seeing so many patients exposed me to all aspects of medicine and that was helpful in exposing me to medical options for subsequent specialization.

Orthopaedics fascinated me because it was the only subspecialty of general practice I could not figure out. Its variety seemed infinite. To learn more about it, I spent my off-duty hours helping the orthopaedists treat the wounded soldiers coming in directly from Vietnam to Clark Field. The pleasure of learning while doing became a mindset which has persisted at an extremely high level to the present. Orthopaedics suited my taste for carpentry and doing research on unique problems. Besides, it was so disorganized that it provided me innumerable opportunities to "create" in all its realms.

It was in the Philippines that I again came in contact with the Filipino "We" people and being among them off base allowed me to relax and really get to know them. On base, however, I was alone because there were only two or three Black officers--whom I rarely saw. Yet, I made several friends with Whites -- friendships lasting up to the present. Still, the tension inherent in racism was palpable immediately upon returning to the USA as with the stares of walking down the street with a White girl next to me and her boyfriend on the other side.

While in the Air Force I learned the significance of having a "Presence" (giving off the sense of sitting right next to another even though you are standing at a distance) and a "Command Appearance" (the way you carry yourself causes others to respect you and not "mess" with you). To maintain respect requires also talking the language of the listener(s).

There were many attractive features of the military, as in having subordinates do what you command them to do. However, I did not like the focus on war and killing people (especially in order to satisfy the greed of Euro-American leaders). Thus, I left after two years and one day. I would not trade the experience but would not want to do it again.

Living Legend Buford Johnson Speaks of Tuskegee Airman

Tuskegee Airmen, retired Lt. Col. Harry Stewart, retired Master Sgt. Buford Johnson, and retired Lt. Col. James Harvey III, stand in the restoration hangar of the National Museum of the United States Air Force. The three spoke about racial discrimination

The Black Voice News

SAN BERNARDINO

Tuskegee Airman, Inc.'s Riverside Chapter Buford Johnson recently was the guest of honor at the Inland Empire African American Chamber of Commerce or IEACC chamber mixer at Alvarez Lincoln, Mercury, Jaguar in the Riverside Auto Center.

"Buford is a living part of American history. We are excited that we can hear the story of the Tuskegee Airmen as Americans first Black air squadron and their contribution to winning the second world war", said Dolores Armstead, IEACC chamber vice president.

According to the history on the organizations website. http://www.tuskegeearmen.org/Tuskegee_Airmen_History.html <http://www.tuskegeearmen.org/Tuskegee_Airmen_History.html> The Tuskegee Airmen were dedicated determined young men who enlisted to become America's first Black military airmen at a time when there were many people who thought that Black men lacked intelligence, skill, courage and patriotism. They came from every section of the country, with large numbers coming from New York City, Washington, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit. Each one possessed a strong personal desire to serve the United States of America at the best of his ability.

The Black airmen who became single-engine or multi-engine pilots were trained at Tuskegee Army Air Field (TAAF) in Tuskegee Alabama. The first aviation cadet class began in July 1941 and completed training nine months later in March 1942. Thirteen started in the first class. Five successfully completed the training, one of them being Captain Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., a West Point Academy graduate. The other four were commissioned second lieutenants, and all five received Army Air Corps silver pilot wings.

From 1942 through 1946, nine hundred and ninety-four pilots graduated at TAAF, receiving commissions and pilot wings. Black navigators, bombardiers and gunnery crews were trained at selected military bases elsewhere in the United States.

Four hundred and fifty of the pilots who were trained at TAAF served overseas in either the 99th Pursuit Squadron (later the 99th Fighter Squadron) or the 332nd Fighter Group. The 99th Fighter Squadron trained in and flew P-40 Warhawk aircraft in combat in North Africa, Sicily and Italy from April 1943 until July 1944 when they were transferred to the 332nd Fighter Group in the 15th Air Force.

The outstanding record of Black airmen in World War II was accomplished by men whose names will forever live in hallowed memory. Each one accepted the challenge, proudly displayed his skill and determination while suppressing internal rage from humiliation and indignation caused by frequent experiences of racism and bigotry; at home and overseas. These airmen fought two wars - one against a military force overseas and the other against racism at home and abroad.

Alvarez Lincoln, Mercury, Jaguar and Arrowhead Credit Union sponsored the chamber mixer.

American Legion Post 710 Honors Vets and POW's

The Black Voice News

SAN BERNARDINO

Senator Gloria Negrete McLeod and Assemblymember Wilmer Amina Carter spoke of the history of Veteran's Day recently at the Guy Winton Morris American Legion Post 710 and thanked their servicemen for the contributions to the country.

Guy Winton Morris was a local veteran who went into the military (not sure but probably was drafted) He lived in the Westside His relative by marriage was the next door neighbor to Jack Hill one of the founders of the Post and an outstanding citizen. Morris served the South Pacific, became ill and died in a military hospital.

After WWII 1945-1946 they decided to form an American Legion Post. They needed a name and the family of Morris lobbied to have his name be used. Jack Hill who was new in town went along with the suggestion and the Guy Winton Morris American Legion Post 710.

James Guy was the only Black member of the American Legion Post 106 in Redlands; he volunteered to help the post get started. It was actually the one who got the ball rolling. Prior to that Blacks were not traditionally accepted in every group but Redlands accepted him.

Even the historically White American Legion Post 14 in San Bernardino was not open to Black members but helped in the establishment of Post 710.

"No event is complete without remember the POW's," said Commander Charles Love.

Other highlights were the presentation of colors and the recognition of the POW's.

Al Hector, 1st Vice Commander, Senator Gloria McLeod, Assemblywoman Wilmer Amina Carter, Commander Charles Love, and Dr. Willie Roberts, a founder of Post 710.

Tuskegee Airmen Honored at CALIFORNIA REALTOR® EXPO 2007

The Black Voice News

ANAHEIM

Two local REALTORS® who served in the famed Tuskegee Airmen unit during World War II were honored recently at the closing luncheon of the CALIFORNIA REALTOR® EXPO 2007 at the Anaheim Convention Center in Anaheim, Calif.

REALTOR® Claude Davis and REALTOR® Theodore (Ted) Lumpkin were honored for their service to the nation and the real estate community during the luncheon, which featured legendary UCLA basketball coach John Wooden and was attended by State Sen. Lou Correa, D-Santa Ana.

Themed "REALTOR® 2.0: The Next Big Thing," the EXPO was Oct. 9-11 at the Anaheim

Convention Center, 800 W Katella Ave., Anaheim.

Davis and Lumpkin were among more than 100 Tuskegee Airmen awarded the Congressional Gold Medal, the highest civilian award from Congress, in the Rotunda of the Congressional Building in Washington, D.C., in March.

Davis is a past president of the Southwest Los Angeles Association of REALTORS® and a past regional vice president of the CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® (C.A.R.). A bomber pilot in the U.S. Air Corps, Davis, 87, resides in the Ladera Heights area of Los Angeles, Calif.

Lumpkin served as an Air Intelligence Officer and is president of the Los Angeles chapter of Tuskegee Airmen Inc. He also serves on the national organization's board of directors. Lumpkin, 87, resides in the Village Green area of Los Angeles, Calif.

Tuskegee Airmen Inc. was formed in 1972 by veterans of the "Tuskegee Experience" during World War II from 1941-1949 to educate the country regarding the combat and stateside records of African Americans during the war. The organization has 51 chapters nationwide.

Supervisor gives turkeys to help residents enjoy the holidays

The Black Voice News

SAN BERNARDINO

For a second year San Bernardino County 5th District Supervisor Josie Gonzales is helping local churches and community-based organizations feed disadvantaged families during the Thanksgiving holiday.

Supervisor Gonzales, along with San Bernardino County 2nd District Supervisor Paul Biane, allocated $5,000 to purchase 500 turkeys for dinners and food baskets. Half of the turkeys will be delivered to 13 churches and local groups in the cities of Colton, Rialto and San Bernardino and the unincorporated area of Muscoy. Meals and/or take-home baskets will help feed the homeless, low-income residents, and seniors.

"The churches and groups that prepare these meals feed the body as well as the spirit of our community; they give hope to our residents in need," said Supervisor Gonzales. "I am thankful that I have this opportunity to help our faith- and community-based organizations help so many during this holiday season."

Turkeys were delivered today to:

- Church of All Nations (San Bernardino)
- City of Colton, Community Services Department
- Door of Hope, Faith and Charity Church (San Bernardino)

- Ecclesia Christian Fellowship (San Bernardino)
- Kiwanis Club of East Rialto
